EDITH KINGDON GOULD.

How the Young Wife Passes the Day with Her Father-in-Law. [Philadelphia Times.]

On every pleasant morning at about 11 o'clock a good solid cart, drawn by two sturdy horses, is driven up the comparatively empty length of Fifth avenue and into the Fifty-ninth-street entrance of Cen-tral Park. A young woman holds the rib." bons, and down at her side in a lower seat enddles a little middle-aged man with glittering black eyes, a full beard, and pallid complexion. The young lady is not re-markable in any way, but to the average New Yorker her face is familiar—more so than that of the little man beside her. Well, this is Edith Kingdon Gould driving her father-in-law, Jav Gould, out for the bracing air of which his delicate bealth is in constant need. The lady has not changed to any considerable degree since she divided the need. The lady has not changed to oors at Daly's Theatre with Ada Rehan. Her face bears the calmer expression of satisfied maternity, and some of the former lustre has gone out of her brunette coloring, but she could step on to Mr. Daly's stage again to-morrow night and convey the illusion that she had been seen there only last week,

George and his wife live in a house on Forty-seventh street just back of their faiher's, which is on the corner of Fifth avenue. There are two bables, numerous nurses, and a little money to take care of all, and there is your picture of domestic happiness. George goes down town every morning at an early bour, after breakfasting with this absolute with the contraction of the definition of the contraction of the contr his charming wife. Then Mrs. George sends round to the stables for her horses and cart, dresses herself in a dark, handsome driving costume, and, with the groom perched behind her, whits around the corner to her father-in-law's house and pulls up before the door with a grace-ful flourish. The famous millionaire is ful flourish. The famous millionaire is watching for her from the wisdow. He watching for her from the wisdow. It comes out, wearing a fur-lined overcoat, a faded, low-crowned pot-hat, and heavy, bunging gloves. He greets his daughter with as cheery a good-morning as though be had no more ponderous duty in the whole world to perform jumps up into his seat beside her, is tucked in the the pleasantest mornents of his whole day. Young Mrs. Conditions of his whole day. Young Mrs. Conditions of the pleasantest mornents of his whole day. Young Mrs. Conditions, and the pleasantest mornents of his whole day. Young Mrs. Gould cuts a circle in the air with her whip-lash, gives a little chuck of the tongue, and away goes Gould and his son's wife over the stone pavement toward the park. It all makes a very nest and educating picture.

One of the great advances in making deadly wespons more effective depends upon the invention of a device by which large quantities of nitro-geialine can be thrown accurately to a distance equal to the range of ordinary rifled guns of large calibre without danger to the gunners. The Zalinski pneumatic gun is only a partial solution of the problem, since while its accuracy and safety are sufficient its range is hmited and the velocity of its projectile is low. The Graydon high-pressure pneumatic gun improves the range, though not sufficiently, but there are doubts as to its safety.

Mr. Walter E. Hicks, of Brooklyn, believes that he with a business of $50,000 a year, with two sons and another daughter besides the plaintiff's wife, the Court should be expected that with a business of $50,000 a year, with two sons and another daughter besides the plaintiff's wife, the Court should be expected that with a business of $50,000 a year, with two sons and another daughter besides the plaintiff's wife, the Court should believe it was ever stipulated that the plaintiff should be admitted a full partner with an equal share of the profits. It fle finds instead that the plaintiff is entitled to 73 per cent. of the profits, less such sum paid him on account from July 1, 1885, until he let the firm in September, 1887, which are doubts as to its safety.

The disks, which are regidly united, revolve on one shait, the power boing given by a 200-horse-power engine. Between the disks, at a distance of ten feet from their centre, are four projectile carriers, set at equal distances apart around the periphery. The projectiles are cylinders about six inches in diameter and about three

A Young Man Who Wanted Half of a Lucrative Business,

A Baltimore special says: About two years ago Ernest Fleischman, formerly of New York, married a daughter of Albert Gottschalk, a prominent wholesale inquor-dealer of Baltimore. To-day, in the City Court, Judge Stewart decided the suit of the son-in-law against the father-in-law as a pariner in business for profits of the business. Fleischman alleged that soon after be became engaged to be married to fiottschalk's daughter the defendant induced against a sure was a largestize business in New him to give up a lucrative business in New York and come to Baltimore, promising him a full share in the liquor business when the couple were married. There was a great deal of shoulder-shrugging prediction gratuitously contributed by outsiders when young George Gould took his wife out a theatre, and the light of precedent cannot in any way be said to have
